

The European Job Search Checklist

12 things European recruiters check before they call you.

01

Your CV is adapted to the European market

Not your home country format. Length, layout, section order and level of detail are all different here.

02

Your professional summary is written for the specific role

A generic summary loses a recruiter in the first ten seconds. Rewrite it for every application.

03

Your achievements are written with numbers

Not what your job description said. What you actually did. Revenue grown, people managed, time saved.

04

Your language skills are listed with honest levels

Native, fluent, B2, C1. In European markets this section can be the deciding factor.

05

Your LinkedIn headline uses exact keywords recruiters search for

Not 'Open to opportunities.' The specific job title you want. That is what appears in recruiter searches.

06

Your LinkedIn location shows your target city

Not where you currently live. Recruiters filter by location. If your profile shows another continent, you will not appear.

07

Your right to work status is clearly stated

EU citizenship, work permit, spouse visa. If you have it, say so. Recruiters filter this out before anything else.

08

You have turned on Open to Work for recruiters only

Private mode means your employer cannot see it. Recruiters can. This flag is filtered in LinkedIn Recruiter searches.

09

Your LinkedIn About section reads like a person wrote it

Not a list of skills. Not a copy of your CV summary. A short, human explanation of who you are and what you are looking for.

10

Your CV passes ATS filters

No heavy graphics, no unusual fonts, no text boxes or columns. Simple layout, standard headings. ATS systems discard complex formats before a human sees them.
